Social Communication Skills Groups – who to include?

These groups help develop social communication skills through structured, focused activities. They provide a safe, familiar environment that often allows pupils to make relationships that extend into other contexts within school. Including a range of children with different strengths and difficulties can provide some appropriate role models that will help all pupils develop.

Think about including:

- Pupils with identified social communication needs
- Shy pupils
- Good role models
- Pupils with language delay
- Pupils who talk too much
